

REGIONAL TRAINING HUBS

The Regional Training Hubs' aim is to improve the retention of medical graduates to rural and regional areas.

The UQ Regional Training Hubs operating in Central Queensland, Wide Bay and Southern Queensland, extend the mandate of the UQ Rural Clinical School beyond medical school graduation to facilitate streamlined pathways into postgraduate vocational training. This complements the existing investment in rural training for university students and seeks to close the hole in the pipeline to rural practice for both GPs and specialists.
